

District Federation Heard State President At Meeting on Friday

Unknown Speakers Had Part in Program of Third District Meeting of State Federation of Women's Clubs at First Dutch Church.

The morning session of the Third district meeting of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs held at the First Reformed Church on Friday, with the Kingston Federation as the hostess group, was concluded with valuable reports of the state chairmen and district representatives of departments. Each department representative who spoke emphasized the fact that her department was not only ready but anxious to place the services of that department at the disposal of every woman of the affiliated clubs of the state federation.

The various honor guests were introduced to the meeting. At the luncheon, the Henrietta Wagon Guild of the young women of the church graciously and ably accomplished the miraculous task of serving 140 women when less than 50 reservations had been made for the luncheon. The appetizing luncheon was served with dispatch.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock, with a second and fine organ recital given by Organist Frederick of the church. At the close of the recital Miss Aiken, in behalf of the members of the Third District most cordially thanked both Organist Frederick and Mrs. Benjamin W. Johnston, the soloist, for the pleasure and inspiration of their music which seemed so fitting a part of the beauty of the church.

Mrs. Arthur J. Norton, Ulster county chairman, then read the "Club Woman's Creed" which proved to be provocative of careful thought.

Miss Aiken called upon Mrs. C. N. Reed, of the Kingston Federation for a few words about the Good Government Committee of that body. Mrs. Reed told of the women's business their study of government with the unit of the city Common Council, the meetings of which body they attended in ever increasing numbers. It was said to be the intent of the women of this committee to commend the good work accomplished by the Common Council, and where necessary, to constructively criticize such procedures as seemed to them to be detrimental to the best good of the community. As the outstanding piece of really good government of the highest order, Mrs. Reed then read the Good Friday Proclamation of Mayor Conrad E. Heisselman which was received with a moment of profound silence followed by an expression of sincerest appreciation of an official act that might well become more universal.

At this point the program was varied by the beautiful singing of Mrs. Benjamin F. Johnston, of "Gloria" by Buzzi-Pecchia, accompanied at the organ by W. Whiting Fredenburgh.

Because of the absence of "Grandma Bailey" of Albany, who has passed her hundred and second birthday and is the ranking senior member of the Third District of the N. Y. State Federation, a telegram of good wishes and sincere regret that she was not present at the meeting.

The first speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. Lawrence Van Den Berg of New Paltz, state chairman of the Department of Education. Mrs. Van Den Berg spoke with clarity and interest on "Modern Progress in Education."

She said that in these days when educational systems are being criticized for frills, fads and fancies, it was her wish to tell of the practical efforts of the State Federation's Department of Education. It has nine divisions in the educational plan: The preschool period, the kindergarten, the elementary, the secondary, the college, the adult, the research, the library and the museum.

Mrs. Van Den Berg illustrated by telling of the material to be found in the Vocational department, available to all through the Federation Educational Department which also helps the child learn to start, run or visit a museum or library, or to undertake research and other activities, such as are included in the first school groups.

The department is now planning to hold an Educational Symposium of meetings and meetings and more meetings in the fall after the summer vacation. This Symposium will be held at the New Paltz Normal School and Miss Elizabeth Pigen of the Educational department of the General Federation will be there. As it will be an all day Symposium, a good luncheon will be served. Another feature will be the presentation of young girls and boys in the training school and their of young women and men who will teach the children in the training school. Discussions will follow.

Mrs. Van Den Berg considered New York state as being a pioneer in modern education, by the objective method of teaching, the correlation of subject matter, the socialized project. Within the unit activity, the school will give training on the adjustment to social changes. A standard of education, and the educational aim of life are being presented. There is the discussion of the individual character of children and of the cultural activities of life in modern education.

Another matter being carefully considered is the school set up; the teachers, their training, character, outlook, etc.; class room equipment.

Dynamite Blast Injured Two Men on Emerson Street Today

John Noble of First Avenue Critically Hurt as He Was Hurled in Air When Blast Unexpectedly Went Off—One Arm Torn Off and Other Injuries—McAllister Also Injured—Both Employed on Works Division Project.

As John Noble of First avenue, a blaster in the employ of the Works Division of the TERA, started to remove the piling to ascertain why a blast of dynamite had failed to discharge, the blast unexpectedly went off in his face and he was hurled in the air, and one arm torn off. The accident occurred on the Emerson street sewer project about 10:30 o'clock this morning. William McAllister of 123 Henry street, foreman on the job, was also badly injured, and may lose the sight of an eye. Both men were rushed to the Kingston Hospital by the police in the ambulance. At the hospital it was stated that Noble's condition was critical while that of McAllister was fairly good.

From what the police learned it was Noble's job to discharge blasts of dynamite which had to be used on the job as rock was encountered in excavating for the new sewer that is being laid by the Works Division.

This morning one of the blasts failed to discharge when set off and Noble went forward to investigate. He had started to remove the timber that covers the charge of dynamite and is used as a piling or carpet to prevent flying rocks from damaging houses on the street. As he started to lift one of the heavy timbers the blast unexpectedly went off. McAllister was assisting him at the time and also received part of the impact from the blast.

The full force of the blast caught Noble as he was leaning over and it is thought he may have sustained internal injuries to his chest. He was also injured about the neck, head and face and the other arm was also injured. McAllister was injured about the face, neck and hands. At the Works Division office on Pine Grove avenue it was said that McAllister may lose the sight of an eye as the result of the explosion.

Today's accident was the first serious accident encountered since work relief was inaugurated in Kingston.

Files Report on Building 32 Streets For $242,000

City Engineer Darrow Submits to Public Works Board Report on Streets—Board Has But $40,000 For Street Building and Works Division Will Be Asked to Assist in Building Streets—Kyrook Used Bought by State TERA.

Following the request made by the board of public works at its meeting Tuesday, City Engineer Henry D. Darrow on Tuesday evening submitted to the board a list of proposed streets to be rebuilt or repaired this year. The list contained 32 streets and the total cost of rebuilding them was estimated at $242,000. At the meeting held that evening to receive the report it was brought out that the board has approximately $10,000 in its budget to use for street building this summer, and it was decided to ask the Works Division of the TERA to assist by building streets here as work relief projects.

The Engineer's Report.

City Engineer Darrow filed with the board the following report:

I herewith submit the following list of streets which are in need of repairs and should have immediate attention:

The Willett streets need special attention, where cracked, and a study is being made as to the best way to make temporary repairs by filling cracks and holding pavement in place.

This city with its present mileage of streets should have a plan to build several miles of permanent pavement each year. I should like our streets, which carry the through and heavy traffic, built with concrete base and a black top wearing surface.

Most of our streets have been built up and have not been graded so as to have a proper foundation course. If any work for permanent is done at present on the streets, all the material must be moved or excavated to a proper depth to allow for 6 to 8 inches of foundation course, and a 2 to 3 inches top or wearing surface. This means expensive construction, as where any extensive work is done on a street for permanent, a foundation must be provided.

I am listing streets as to length, width, square yards, type and cost. A steel street should first be provided with proper culverts and ditches, and straightened where possible. This street is one of the main entrances to the city and should have a substantial foundation. I have only listed it this year as to drainage and to keep it in repair, on account of its importance.

Cannon Freed, Works Anew For Prohibition

Bishop and Miss Burroughs Found Not Guilty of Charge of Conspiring to Conceal Contributions.

Washington, April 28 (AP).—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., freed of conspiracy charges arising from the wet-and-dry campaign of '28, turned anew today to his fight in behalf of prohibition.

The gray-haired leader of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now 63, rushed toward the general conference of that church now in session at Jackson, Miss.

Before boarding his train here late last night, Cannon pleaded himself again to the cause of prohibition. Despite the physical strain of a nearly three-weeks-long trial, which found emotions near the breaking point at its end, the bishop declared himself feeling "far better" than when the first rumblings of legal trouble started four years ago.

A jury found Cannon and Miss Ada L. Burroughs, treasurer of his headquarters committee, anti-Smith Democrats, "not guilty" yesterday of a charge of conspiring to conceal contributions made for defeating Alfred E. Smith, 1928 Democratic presidential nominee, in the South.

James Castor Shoots Self in Right Temple. Had Been Out of Work

Innocent Man Was Also Depressed Over His Wife's Illness—Brought To Beneficent Hospital in Critical Condition.

James Castor, a man of about 35 years of age, was brought to the Beneficent Hospital this morning suffering from a self-inflicted bullet wound in the right temple. He was treated by Dr. L. O. Rymph, who is the family physician.

Castor, who lives opposite the Wallkill Valley Railroad station at Binnewater, is said to have been very depressed over the fact that he has had no work since last summer, when he was engaged in painting signs and guard rails on the highway work. In addition to this, his wife has been in ill health. He went to his wife's room this morning and asked how she was feeling. Later Mrs. Rebecca Kirkwood, who lives in the same house, heard him pacing the floor, following which he left the house. Some time afterward Mrs. Kirkwood went out into the yard, when her attention was attracted by Castor's feet sticking out from the doorway of an outdoor toilet. Investigating she found that he was covered with blood and immediately notified Benjamin Barton, a storekeeper at Binnewater, who is in touch with Castor's brothers, and word was sent to the sheriff's office and to Coroner Connor.

Deputy Sheriff Abram Moynihan and Trooper Arthur Reilly immediately went to the scene and conducted an investigation. They found Castor had shot himself with a .22 calibre rifle, the bullet entering his right temple about two inches above the ear. He was still living and was taken to the hospital in the Conner ambulance.

Besides his wife there are two stepchildren, one of them a young man of 13 who is at the CCC camp and the other at home. Silas Castor, employed in the wine store, is a brother and there is also a brother, Andrew Castor, who has a gas station at Bloomington.

County Superintendent Loughran Voted From Office By Supervisors, 17 to 16

N. Y. Legislature Ends Its Session After 17 Weeks of Bitter Fighting

Of Eighteen Charges Brought, Supervisors Dismissed 2 of Them

Permanent Liquor Control and One Cent Emergency Tax on Gasoline Sent to Governor—Assembly Kills Measure Appropriating $102,000,000 in State Aid to Schools—New York City Charter Revision Passed.

Albany, N. Y., April 28 (AP).—After 17 weeks of political controversy scarcely equalled in the history of the state, the New York legislature ended its 157th session early today, sending to Governor Lehman at the last minute the Kleinfeld permanent liquor control bill and a measure continuing for another year the one cent emergency tax on gasoline.

Adjournment came at 2:30 a. m. The fighting was bitter to the last moment. Only a few hours before adjournment, the Republican-controlled Assembly killed one of the governor's bills, which he claimed was necessary to balance the budget.

This was the measure appropriating the $102,000,000 in state aid to schools. Governor Lehman claimed that without the bill school districts might go into the courts and attempt to get their share of the $12,000,000 which was cut from the state aid appropriation.

The Republicans contended that the budget was in balance without the bill. It was defeated the second time by a vote of 46 to 71.

The Kleinfeld liquor bill was passed by a vote of 82 to 49 after 12 amendments had been offered and lost. The measure provides for continuation of the present set-up substantially as it is, but permits drinking at bars.

A new attempt to bring up unemployment insurance legislation in the lower house was lost by a vote of 59 to 61, and a congressional representative was left to die in the Assembly rules committee.

A final effort was made by Governor Lehman to get action on upstate local government reform, but it brought no results.

His message to the legislature was the basis for an attack by Senator Thomas C. Desmond, Newburgh Republican. Desmond asserted that the governor "talked county and city government reform" but did not "perform like he talked."

The Senate also fished through the closing hours Mayor LaGuardia's bill opening the way for pay cuts and furloughs for New York city teachers. The Assembly concurred in an amendment to the measure.

N. Y. C. Charter Revision.

New York city charter revision was passed in the midst of a wild melee in the Assembly shortly before adjournment after the Dunnigan bill had been passed unanimously by the Senate. The measure was caught in a tangle of parliamentary procedure which almost defeated it.

The Senate, before sending it over, had amended the original bill to add the name of Frank J. Prial, former deputy controller of New York city, to the list of 27 names already on the commission. Prial is a strong Tammany adherent. When the bill came to the lower house both the Democrats and the Republicans offered other names to be added to the list.

The Assemblyman at the suggestion of Herbert Brownell, Jr., passed the Democratic amendment and defeated the Republican amendment.

Meanwhile, the Senate had adjourned, making it impossible to concur in the amendment. The bill was automatically killed. Both parties charged the other with the responsibility for defeating the bill.

Democratic Leader Irwin Steingart finally offered to amend the measure again to withdraw the name of John J. McCarthy, which had been inserted, restoring it to the form in which it passed the Senate. Brownell then moved to strike out the name of Prial.

The first amendment was passed and the second lost. The measure, in the form in which it passed the Senate was then called up for a vote, but many of the members had left the chamber and the vote was only 71 to 23, votes short of passage. LOUGHRAN TO TAKE CASE TO APPELLATE DIVISION

At the conclusion of the hearing before the board of supervisors Friday afternoon when County Superintendent James P. Loughran was voted from office by a 17 to 16 party vote, Harry H. Flemming, counsel for Mr. Loughran, said that an application would be made for a certiorari order for a review of the case before the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. This is the tribunal to which an appeal from the action of the board must be taken.

Whether a stay will be sought pending determination of the matter before the Appellate Division is not known. Should an application for a stay to prevent Mr. Loughran's re-election from office pending the determination by the court be made it will be made to a special term of supreme court.

The appeal will not be heard before the Appellate Division for at least several weeks as it will be necessary for Stenographer Charles M. Ellison to have the minutes transcribed, the case printed and prepared for submission. There are at least 1,000 pages of testimony in the case and Mr. Ellison said that would take until perhaps June to get out. The record is one of the longest made in this county in some time.

Jack and Beanstalk Junior League Play

The demand has been so persistent that the Junior League give its annual children's play that it has been decided to present "Jack and the Beanstalk" at The Municipal Auditorium at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of May 8. All who have witnessed these delightful plays in the past have fallen under the spell of their charm, freshness and originality. They have had simplicity, color and directness which appeals to all children and adults as well as avoided the artificiality which spoils most so-called children's plays. This performance will surpass in many ways any of the others presented. It is based on the familiar and well loved story of that name and contains all of the characters and situations which have made it a classic for generations. Every child fortunate enough to be in the audience that afternoon and every adult who remembers the delightful thrill of terror which the eagerly anticipated words "PI. PI. FO. FUNN. I smell the blood of an Englishman!" never failed to give will be enchanted anew at this delightful picturization.

The cast is as follows:

Jack's Mother, Miss Rutland Phelps
Mrs. Newton Fessenden
Miss Goss, Miss Isabel Erickson
Miss Goss, Miss Isabel Erickson

This new service goes into effect with today's issue.

Seventeen Democratic Supervisors Voted Solidly to Oust Mr. Loughran, While Republicans Voted to Retain Him—Successor May Be Selected Monday Night.

County Superintendent of Highways James P. Loughran who has held that office since 1909 under appointment by the board of supervisors was voted from the office Friday afternoon by a strict party vote of 17 to 16.

For two weeks a vast amount of testimony had been offered in an attempt to substantiate 18 charges which were preferred by Supervisor Tattill McDowell of Wawarsing and which had subsequently been adopted by the board by the 17 Democrats sitting on the board.

Of the 18 charges preferred two were voted dismissed Friday afternoon on motion of Supervisor McDowell, seconded by Supervisor George, and one was dismissed so far as certain portions of it were concerned. That action was taken after the board had held a five minute executive session behind closed doors. The two charges dismissed were No. 10, the charge that county highways could have been constructed by contract at a lesser cost than under the system used, No. 16, that County Superintendent of Highways on March 2, 1934, refused to furnish certain information requested by the Committee on Highways of the board and that he refused to cooperate with that committee. Both of these charges were dropped because no evidence was offered at the trial to substantiate them. The charge which was partially dropped for the same reason was part of charge 11 which referred to the discharge of David Brown and John Bolmer of Kingston for political reasons. Although Mr. Brown had been present at many of the sessions and was present Friday afternoon no evidence was given as to his discharge.

Each charge was voted upon separately and the result was the same, 17 to 16 to substantiate the charges and to each vote H. H. Flemming for respondent took an exception. Following the vote in which the Democrats voted solidly to oust Mr. Loughran and the Republicans voted solidly to retain him, Supervisor Ross Osterhout of Marbleton moved that the board go on record as dismissing Mr. Loughran from office since the charges had been substantiated and that the clerk notify Mr. Loughran to vacate the office at once. Supervisor Van Nostrand seconded the motion and it was adopted by the same score 17 to 16. Supervisor J. C. Denning moved for an adjournment until Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Supervisor Finch seconded the motion and it was carried, after Supervisor McDowell of Wawarsing had amended the motion to the effect that the board adjourn out of respect to the memory of Chester Young of Nanpach, a former member of the board.

The afternoon session Friday opened up with Mark Sampson, clerk of the board of elections, on the stand. He testified that under the law there were 30 election districts in the county and in each district there were two committeemen from each of the political parties.

Next Theodore Van Aken of Denning was called. In the fall of 1929 he said he worked on State Camp bridge under Foreman Shesley and had seen Mr. Loughran there. Mr. Loughran had nothing to say there as to the political situation or the election of a Republican supervisor in Denning. Van Aken said he was a Republican. The witness on cross-examination said Sheridan Van Aken was an uncle and a Republican committeeman. Sheridan Van Aken had been foreman. The whole matter was so long and tedious that he could not say positively that Mr. Loughran had been on the job there but that was his recollection. He knew he had never heard Mr. Loughran discuss politics at the State Camp bridge job.

Heard No Politics.

William Smith of Denning called. He too had worked on the State Camp bridge, saw Mr. Loughran but heard nothing said about politics. Cross-examined he said he had applied to Ed Shesley for the job and nothing had been said about politics. The coming election was not mentioned. At present he was not employed on the highways. Witness said he was a Democrat. He knew Mr. Coddington had been spoken to him about this case. He said he never had been told that a Republican supervisor should be elected in Denning in 1929 if more roads were to be built in the town. Last summer he was employed under Sheridan Van Aken. He knows Supervisor George. When he got his job on the roads he asked Sheridan Van Aken and got the job. Nothing was said about politics. He said he had not actively supported any candidate for supervisor but he was an enrolled Democrat.

Kanse Hamilton, another Denning citizen, saw the State Camp bridge, said he had heard nothing (Continued on Page Seven)

Through continuous rehearsals the children's play, "Jack and the Beanstalk," which is to be given under the auspices of the Junior League, is fast rounding into shape for its presentation at the Municipal Auditorium on the afternoon of May 8. This organization is naturally exerting every effort to maintain in this production the same high standard that has been always shown both in their former children's plays and in their annual revues. Upon this occasion members of the League under the direction of Miss Helen Sheldon are even making the scenery and stage settings, which in every way will be reminiscent of the conventional fairy book illustrations of this delightful story. Tickets may be secured from any member of the Junior League.

Murphy, Mrs. Frederick Warren, Mrs. Hamilton Boyd, Mrs. William Kingman, Mrs. Charles Hardenbergh and Mrs. Roger H. Loughran. This display was quickly followed by a showing of sixteen wedding dresses which was certainly one of the high spots of the evening. Murphy, Mrs. Howard Winne, Mrs. Milton Stewart, Mrs. Clarence Fromer, Mrs. Agnes Vignes, the Darrow family, the Noyes family, Mrs. Charles Hardenbergh, Mrs. Frank Eastman and Mrs. Howard Van Winkle.

While the audience was still completely in the mood of the ultra-modern, Miss Beulah Phelps and John Davis of Saugerties did a modern dance interpretation, with all the Black Driver—Lady, you got a cat?

 Woman—driving with hubby—I can't help it. I'm married to him.

West man, asks an editorial, did you support popular government?
 Speaking offhand, we'd say the inventor of the gasoline tax.

Complaint is made against the new automobiles, that the fenders don't seem when the engine is running, and a fellow is apt to get fooled by one. Well, we'd just like to own one.

Dorothy (muttering)—I said that you could kiss me, but I didn't say that you could hug me.
 Harry—Oh, that's all right, I just threw in the clutch.

Among recent inventions is one listed as being able to tell whether two people are in love. What's the matter with the rumble seat?

Woman—Does your husband ever complain about meals you serve?
 Neighbor—Yes; only last night he told me that I did not patronize as good a delicatessen as his mother used to.

A majority of the motor cars now in use are defective, says an expert—and so are a considerable proportion of the drivers.

For a nation that has been but a step removed from bankruptcy and the poorhouse, how do you suppose we manage to buy gas for 25,000,000 automobiles?

Everybody is entitled to courtesy—even your wife.

Movie Director (to southerner)—When are you going to stop saying "you all"?
 Southerner—It took me 25 years to learn how to say "you all", and I'll be darned if I can learn to say "youse guys" in two weeks.

The automobile driver who forgets to "Stop, Look and Listen" at railroad crossings will soon discover that posterity is just around the corner.

Woman—Is your husband mean?
 Bridge Partner—Mean? I never heard of anybody meaner. Why, he deliberately says things in his sleep so I'll keep awake in order to hear them, when I'm so tired I'm ready to pass out.

If a woman believes everything her husband tells her, that's a sign that he doesn't tell her very much.

Uncle Will (handing his nephew $1 bill)—Now be careful with that money, Junior. Remember the old saying, "a fool and his money are soon parted."
 Junior—Yes, Uncle Will, but I want to thank you for parting with it just the same.

Soaking in Spring sunshine as he went down the street a local man said: "I would rather live in Kingston than die in Florida—or even California."

Swell Souze—Where was I last night, Thompson?
 Valet—I couldn't say, sir, but the bank cashier just called up on the phone to ask if it's all right to pay out a check you've written on your dress collar.

No one ever broke themselves of the strong drink habit by smacking their own lips after each drink.

Hubby—Gee, this horseshodish is hot!
 Wife—It shouldn't be. It's been in the ice box all day.

Ever realize how habits govern lives? Someone has said habit is second nature. It is all that. Physicians will tell you many diseases are merely habits. People become amiable or quarrelsome by habit. Thrift, prodigality, temperance, booze fighting, etc., are merely habits.

"Love" is responsible for some bad marriages—and some worse songs.

The Captured Head
 By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"I don't see why I couldn't clean the inside of this tin can better if I put my head right in it," Blacky Bear said to himself. "It's a good idea. I'm a very bright little cub."

So he put his head right into the tin can. But he couldn't get it out again. Oh, he was a miserable little cub. He was frightened. He didn't know what he would do.

Honey Bear noticed what had happened and she began to growl in sympathy and fear. Blacky tried and tried to get his head out, but he felt he was stuck in the tin forever and ever.

"Willy Nilly! Willy Nilly!" called Honey Bear.

Willy Nilly had just started cleaning his house when he heard her cries.

He rushed out to see what had happened and there he saw the body of Blacky Bear outside the tin but his head was missing.

"I'll get a can opener, and make a larger hole," he said, and ran back into the house.

But when he came out again Blacky Bear had wriggled his head free. It was a very sticky looking head, but he didn't mind that.

"I should spank you," said Honey Bear, "but I think you have been punished enough."

"Oh yes, growl, growl, I've been punished quite enough," growled Blacky Bear. There he sat, mornfully rubbing his head.

"At any rate," continued Honey Bear, "you'll use your tongue in cleaning out the tin next time. I imagine you've learned that lesson."

Gayety Over For Stavisky's Widow

In Prison Now, She Hopes For Job To Support Her Children

By EDWARD G. MANNING
 Paris, April 27—Prison bars are the unhappy inheritance of the beautiful widow of Serge Alexandre Stavisky, whose swindling career is a French national scandal.
 Madame Arlette Simon Stavisky, once a mannequin in a world famous dressmaker's salon, later the toast of brilliant parties in the most fashionable resorts of France, now occupies a dingy cell in the Petite Roquette, women's prison of Paris.
 She is charged with complicity in fraud and receiving and concealing stolen property. But that worries her less than the welfare of her two children, Micheline, six years old, and Claude, four, waiting with their mother in a furnished flat for mother to come home. They think their father is merely "on a journey."

Hopes To Find Job.
 Gone are the happy days when she and her little son and daughter sat in a bower of flowers and watched gay festivals at Cannes. Put away are the skimming costumes the family donned for slides down fashionable Alpine slopes, and the beach garb worn at Deauville and other smart shore resorts.

Whenever she is released from prison, Madame Stavisky intends to find a job to support herself and the children, for the man who was accused of nearly $40,000,000 in frauds left nothing, she says, when a pistol bullet ended his life in a mountain hideaway near Chamonix.

"One Look"—And Love.
 Tall, slender, with large dark eyes, Arlette Simon first attracted "Handsome Alex" Stavisky in a Paris night club nine years ago. It was love at first sight, she said.

Arlette, who was to know all his luxuries that money could buy, and a humble start in life. Her father, a provincial Frenchman of modest means, was killed in the Argonne.

Her mother, after the war, married again and Arlette came to Paris and got a mannequin's job. One evening she was in a night club.

"Serge came in and stopped before our table," she said. "My friend introduced me to him. Serge and I took one look at each other and fell in love."

Madame Arlette Simon Stavisky, widow of the French swindler, once was a toast of fashionable resorts. Now she is hoping for a job when she is released from prison, so she can support her two children, Micheline, 6, and Claude, shown here with her.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS
 HOLLYWOOD—Add come-backer.

Aileen Pringle, who used to smote torridly opposite Lew Cody in "Silents," is in a new picture—and Grant Withers, former husband of Loretta Young, is back, married again, and trying to get back on the screen.

More by-the-way notes:
 Elizabeth Bergner, the "Catherine the Great" actress, fans are raving about, promises to be as "difficult" as Garb. A Hollywood star, recently returned from London, was in the Bergner dressing room when they tried to persuade her to run over to another theater for a personal appearance before royalty at her picture's opening.

And Bergner was terror-stricken—not by the thought of royalty—but at the idea of obtruding herself on an audience that had come to see "Catherine," not Bergner. She didn't go.

Naming Things After Mae
 Among the things given Mae West's name are a rose—in Illinois—and a farmer's cow—in Ohio. If Mae wished, she could have beauty parlors, delicatessens, dress and ice cream shops, dolls, perfumes, and even a shaving soap named after her. She has had others.

Reginald Denry has been in pictures 15 years—and wants to be a director.

A New Parlor Game
 A new parlor game provides no end of fun at movie parties—especially where the guests go feline. They take a list of titles of pictures and plays and match them with players the titles suggest. For instance, "The Trumpet Blows"—Jimmie Durante.

Gangster movies may be tabu, but here's Cecil B. DeMille proclaiming similarities in technique between the ways of modern spot-potters and ancient takers-for-a-ride. Anent the goings-on in "Cleopatra" he says: "The only difference is that they used chariots there instead of bullet proof automobiles, and daggers and spears instead of machine guns and automatics."

"Men in White," the play about doctors, already made into a picture, has suggested something. One producer has on schedule a film tentatively titled, "Ladies in White." Not, Mr. Lasky, about nurses?

Words and Music

"Hey," bawled the traffic cop. "Where are you heading for in such a rush?"
 "Georgia."
 "Here's two tickets."

Talks to parents

Pride Of Possession
By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

Sophie was the child of cultured parents, and lived in a home full of books and of interested discussion of literature.

But for some reason she did not read the books, nor did the discussion of interest, and seemed to be growing up with an ignorance of the world's best thought.

Finally her parents started a library for her if they wanted her to read a book they bought it for her, until gradually quite a collection of inexpensive classics filled the shelves in her room.

Owning the books seemed to make a difference. Sophie began to read and to take pride in her collection, even recommending and lending special favorites to her school and playmates.

It is often possible to stimulate a taste for reading in this way. Pride of ownership awakens an interest in one's possessions. In this day of cheap editions it is possible to build up a considerable library at very little expense, and in so doing, one can always be sure of the lasting value of the gift. In time these books will be the nucleus of the child's own choice of books to live with.

If the father has any talent for carpentry a set of shelves with space for additional stock will be an added incentive to the collecting instinct. The simplest kind of shelves will do. Often they can be built about a steam heater in a corner otherwise useless for furniture.

In one household all available space of that kind has been utilized, and the radiators are quite as effective and much less of a nuisance and eyesore than in their lonely isolation.

The shelves can be painted the color of the walls or woodwork, and when lined with colorful books give added charm to the child's room.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

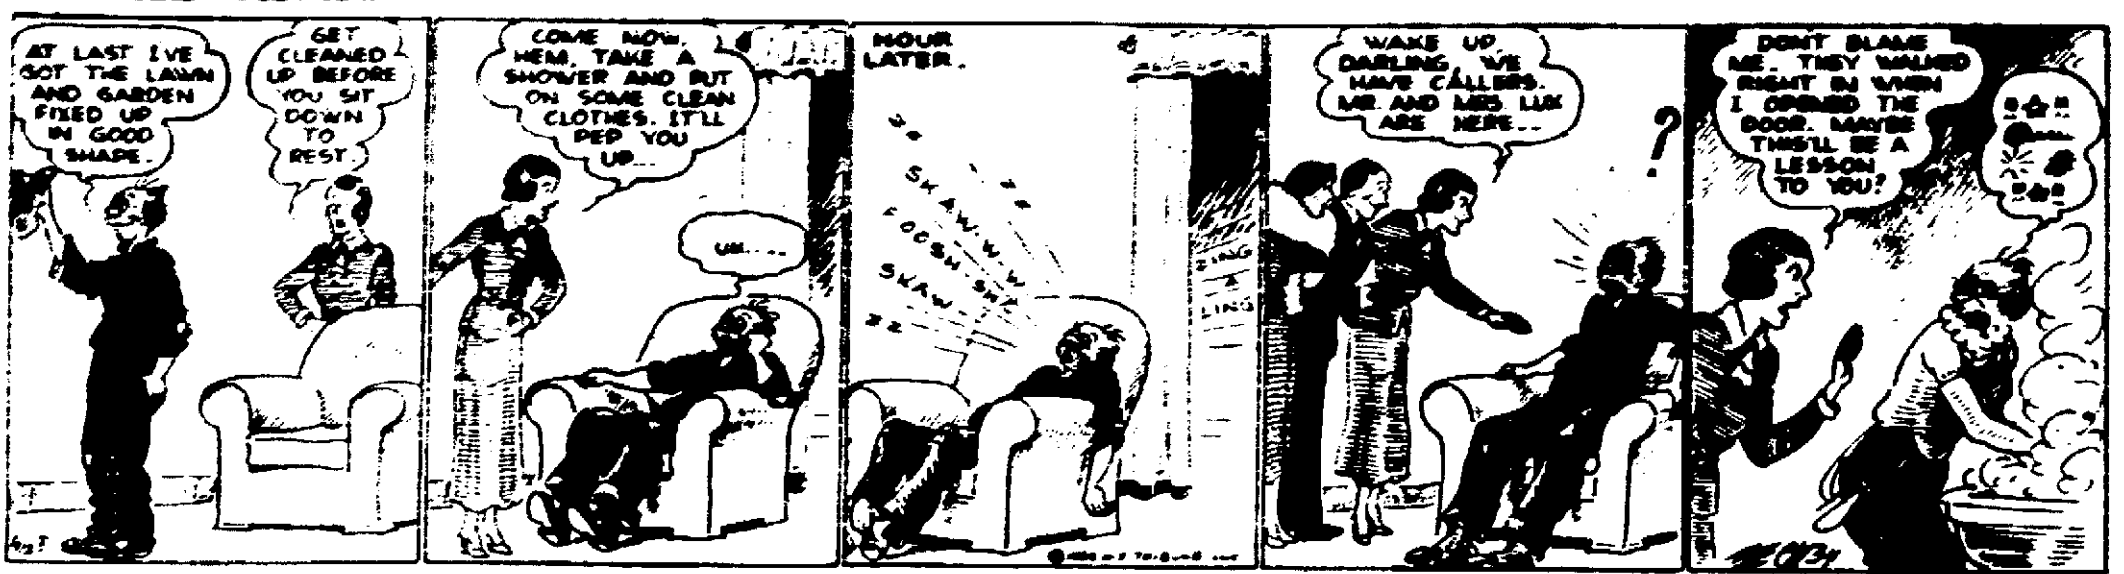

With French milliners giving importance to white hats, especially Tabbet and Melrose, it seemed that the fashion was inescapable. Another logical reason for their revival is the many new ideas in white neckwear of all kinds, which, with the present scheme of assembling accessories literally forced the white hat "into the open."

Just one spring day when the new millinery blossomed forth on the heads of smart New Yorkers immediately proved that the flattery of the white hat plus all the other reasons for its being good fashion news was bearing fruit. Among the styles worn were bretons, berets, and tricorne developed in stitched pique, straw fabric, and belting. Some of the models were all white, others added touches in the form of feather wings of fancies in navy or brown.

Some of the smartest milliners shows in uptown shops are banded with imported ribbon such as belting with an embroidered design. Wheat on green or navy blue is effective, flower clusters are used, and so are cherries. Handpainted ribbons represent another novelty, this introducing a pattern, and often having the same effect as an embroidered design.

What's Next on Your Dress Program?

New York. By this time it is taken for granted that the bloom is off the rose in so far as the first spring costume is concerned, and that one's interest has projected itself into more summery things.

Apparently, the American girl ushered in Spring, 1934, in a suit with feminine accents, even though the suit itself was inclined to be severe. Her next preoccupation is with the sheer jacket costume, dark or partly dark, in which to appear, off and on, during the summer in town. It has developed that brown shades honors with blue for such costumes. With both a gold, or burnt straw, hat may be worn, a Leghorn or any of the so-called natural straws, plus colored trimmings.

The print dress is another type of immediate interest. If one is thrifty as well as smart, see to it that the jacket of your "sheer" can double as a jacket for your print. Should the print already have its own jacket, see that it is chosen to be worn by way of change, with the sheer. The printed coat or jacket worn over a plain dress is one of the whims of the moment, just as the darker blouse, gilet or scarf are new-est with a suit.

You are not at all likely to forget that taffeta dresses are being worn about on the street these days. In gloriole effects, they look crisp and clear cut with their rather large collars, some of which are on choir boy lines, and some Garboesque.

For evening, the silhouette seems definitely to have decided to be full at the back. This is achieved by fan pleating or a gore. There is also the sash to be depended upon, to break the line we were once so insistent on leaving unbroken.

Old gold is one of the newest shades to report warrant a cable, and its return is credited to an even greater vogue for gold ornaments and jewelry.

Along the shopping thoroughfares the percentage of suits worn is overwhelming. The long-coat suit is a general favorite, and many of the women wore it in double breasted and reefer styles.

An exclusive importer of hand-knit suits says that in colors she continues to highlight the dusty pastels, especially pinks and blues. A soft blue on periwinkle cast is a particular favorite. Her greens range from Persian to a blue green that is very smart with yellow. For her patterned fabrics she prefers bright, sharp contrasts.

Brown is scheduled for a special spotlight in sheer fabrics. In net for evening or for daytime, with chiffon or organdie, for alternatives. It must not be ignored for beach or general wear.

The ensemble that can be worn for luncheon or afternoon cocktails is shown with full length coat, in sheer crepe, featuring an interesting elbow length sleeve, and a black and white print frock with detail or applique of the print outlining the scarf.

For all-day wear is the ensemble in center, in combining a women silk in a Glenurquhart plaid with jacket that looks like a tunic when worn buttoned at back as in this sketch, or more tailored with buttoned closing.

For evening is the black costume with dress top and little jacket of fine organdie finely embroidered.

It's Taffeta Time Again

New York—Evening dresses are less subject to change with the seasons than are day dresses. Then one wears "pretty" much the same sort of thing winter or summer, with the exception of the heavier velvets which are discarded for organdies and the several ethereal-looking cottons and muslins now in season.

There are novelty summer velvets, and some charming sheers dotted in velvet which you may like, but on the whole, such fabrics as taffetas, lace, satin, crepes, chiffons and nets are not peculiar to any one season.

There are many very lovely dresses for a woman who has graduated from ruffled net, organdie and such. A type of dress one finds most useful en route to somewhere when confronted with the problem of having to be presentable for a formal occasion.

Dinner and dance frocks are long, often with trains. There are really well-dressed women who insist that the floor's the limit even for evening. More and more, women elect to wear knee-length frocks for those semi-formal goings on that crowd the day's end. This is especially true, now that daylight saving has turned evening into an over-long twilight.

It is because of this that women have taken with such zest to the very large silks one sees about. Taffeta is a prime favorite with the woman who isn't partial to brims one can see through and who insists that a trim must shade rather than throw shadows.

Becoming Beach Conscious

Brown as a beach color has been mentioned from time to time this year. And it cannot be stressed too strongly, for during the past few seasons it has been restricted to high style and only now is it becoming an important rival of the bright blue in lower-priced bathing suits.

When Dining In and Dining Out

Dressing for the New Leisure

Fun pleating is the feature of the pink sheer crepe embroidered in Ondole negligee at left, as seen in the train and sleeves of light blue sheer crepe. This is accentuated by lace inserts in the same color embroidered in silver in the sleeves. The third negligee is in white silk or pink. The ruffles are pleated edged.

An Unexpected Reunion
By GRACE BLAIR

Gloria looked up from the evening paper she was reading and there was a man standing before her. It was the man who had been with her when she was a child. He was now an old man, but she recognized him. He was the man who had been with her when she was a child. He was now an old man, but she recognized him.

"There's an elderly man here who will give a ring to his home, rest free. If they have their own furniture and will let him live with them as one of the family. In no more than glad to wait on him and perhaps we could persuade Aunt Sue to come and live with us."

"Life might be a terrible old man," cautioned Larry.

But, next day, Gloria, looking very sweet and charming went out to interview Mr. Dixon.

Mr. Dixon was an elderly man who carried his years well. His expression was gentle, for he was a gentleman from his silver hair to his well polished slippers but his eyes were that peculiar blue which can, if necessary, turn to points of hard steel.

He liked Gloria. She was the only one of the many applicants for the house that he really liked.

"Friends," he told her quite frankly, "have been kind enough to give me this house and I want to live in it if possible. Do you think you could make an old man feel at home with you and your husband. Home is the most wonderful place on this earth—if it is really home."

"Oh," exclaimed Gloria. "I feel I could call you Daddy Dixon right away." Her soft eyes filled with tears. "Do you—a—like me?"

"My dear," said Daddy Dixon, "you and your husband can move down this afternoon if you want to—that's how much I like you."

So Larry and Gloria moved out to Daddy Dixon's quiet house with its bit of garden and during the settling of the furniture there was a slight dispute.

"No," Gloria's tone was very final, "we simply will not take that lovely bed room overlooking your garden. The nicest room in the house is for Daddy Dixon or no one."

"I'm not used to being bossed about by women folks," smiled Dixon and there was the softest of lights in his blue eyes, "you see I've never married."

And Gloria knew without any more being said that Daddy Dixon was being true to some loved one—some romance of the past.

The arrangement was more than successful and even Larry felt that to be living under the influence of a man so gentle and yet so firm was a great privilege and he often wondered what had brought Dixon down in the financial world. They never however spoke of these intimate matters.

And when all was nicely settled Aunt Sue was invited down. She had persistently refused to make her home with Larry and Gloria saying that youngsters were better off by themselves and she continued her lonely existence.

Larry brought Aunt Sue out on the train with him. Aunt Sue seemed always to be dreaming of a past and in the depths of her clear brown eyes was a glow as steady as to make the younger generation wonder what it meant.

Daddy Dixon and Gloria rushed from the house when they saw the two coming in the garden gate and they met just half way up the old flagged path.

Aunt Sue was hugged up in Gloria's arms so swiftly that she and Daddy Dixon did not at first glimpse one another.

Then: "Sue—Sue my dear."

"Donald—my own Donald," and Aunt Sue promptly avowed and would have fallen but that Dixon's arm was swift as lightning and strong as steel.

He waved Larry aside. "No—they took her from me once—she's mine now," and carried Aunt Sue tenderly into the house.

Larry turned to Gloria. "What are you crying about, old girl?" he asked but his voice stuck in his throat in his effort to sound manly about it all. He took his wife within his arms and together they followed into the cottage.

They stood for a second only in the doorway of the big living room. Daddy Dixon was down on his knees beside the Chesterfield and Aunt Sue's wisp of lace handkerchief was in his hand. He was brushing very softly something from the crease of the silver headed Sue and her white hand fluttered against his cheek.

Gloria and Larry tiptoed away. A scant week later, when there was a golden band on Aunt Sue's finger and Daddy Dixon was very proud and very happy he pieced in the bits of the story that rounded up in his having advertised for some one to live with him.

"I had a score of relatives who were fighting like tigers to get my money," he told them "hypocrites, all of them. It was the generation from which they sprung who tore my loved one from me—my own Sue here—and I made up my mind they should not inherit anything from me. That was why I wanted to find a family who could really love me and I think—you I know I found all I was seeking—and more."

And Daddy Dixon smiled his gentle smile.

COUNTRY LIFE FOR HIM

Richard J. Reynolds, who recently inherited $25,000,000, has given up his life of adventuring all over the world for the quiet and seclusion of Sapelo Island, off Georgia, which he has leased. He is shown here with his wife, the former Elizabeth Dillard, a childhood schoolmate. In the background is the palatial home the young couple will occupy.
